Program Arranged For S. C. M. Visitor

Margaret Kinney Guest of Organization For Week

A varied program has been arranged by the S.C.M., which is, this week, host to Margaret Kinney, the Associate General Secretary of the Student Christian Movement of Canada. Miss Kinney, a graduate of the University of Alberta, will be in the city till next Monday night. She is staying at the R.Y.C. and will be spending much of her time at Strathcona Hall.

The visitor will attend the supper meeting on Thursday for Dr. John R. Mott. The regular Chapel Service in Divinity Hall will be led by Miss Kinney next Sunday. On Monday afternoon, there will be an informal tea for women students in Strathcona Hall, at which she will speak on a topic of special interest to women. During the course of her stay, Miss Kinney will also be the guest of several of the regular study groups.

Miss Kinney was one of the outstanding undergraduates at Alberta in her day, being a leader of several campus activities and a well-known athlete, especially in basketball. Last winter, as National Travelling Secretary of the S. C. M., she visited most of the universities of Western and Eastern Canada. During the past summer, she attended several student conferences in Europe, including the Swanwick Conference of the British S. C. M., the executive meeting of the World's Student Christian Federation at Geneva and the conference at Bouffemont, France, of the International Student Service.

Party Arranged

The S.C.M. is holding a party on Thursday, November 29 at 8:30 after the supper for Dr. J. R. Mott for all its members and friends. A program has been planned consisting of games, folk-dancing and barn-dancing. Refreshments will be served at eleven o'clock. It is hoped that all S.C.M.'ers will turn out to join in the fun and to meet all their old friends. There will be a nominal charge of ten cents to cover the cost of refreshments.

Dental Association

Members of the Montreal Dental Association will be addressed by Dr. G. Franklin and Dr. Brown of the McGill Dental Faculty at a meeting to be held in the Arts Building this evening. They will speak on "Thoughts on the Prevention of Malocclusion," and "Sociology and the Patient," respectively.

Fur Coat

Anyone with information as to a fur coat removed from Strathcona Hall last Wednesday night is asked to communicate same to OR. 1144.

Remembrance Day Services Cancelled

REMEMBRANCE Service, inaugurated some four years ago by the late Sir Arthur Currie, to commemorate the members of the staff and student body who had passed away during the previous twelve months, will not be observed this year, though it was formerly an annual custom.

However it is expected that the loss sustained by the University during the past year of its principle, of Dean McKay and of Professor Emeritus Murray, will be observed in some other fashion. The anniversary of Sir Arthur Currie's death occurs on Friday and will be observed in a yet undetermined manner.

Student Pacifism Shown In Varsity War Questionaire

Undergrad Newspaper Carries Out Plan Suggested by Daily

FURTHER results from the War Questionnaire instituted by the McGill Daily again confirm the fact that student opinion in Canada is highly in favour of pacifism. The University of Toronto "Varsity" reports that, out of 200 answers, only 13 will go to war unconditionally, while 99 refuse under any circumstances. The remainder will support the government only if they believe the war justified.

Ideas of demonstrations and education were again to the front, with one of the favourite means of preventing war being a general strike. Other favourites of the more radical element were mass meetings and non-payment of taxes. In addition several stated that, although they would not engage in war, they would render humanitarian services.

Methods offered for the ensuring of world peace were varied, the most popular being the abolition of all pictures presenting war in a favourable light. The League of Nations and the World Court also met with approval, but a world federation of nations received very little support. On the whole the views expressed seemed similar to those at McGill and Western Universities.

Chemistry Viewed

Dr. Hatcher Speaks Before X.Y. Club

Speaking informally before the X.Y. Club, Dr. Hatcher, of the Chemistry Department, addressed a supper meeting of that group last night. As the subject had been left to the choice of the speaker, Dr. Hatcher allowed members to question him on any subject they wished. Several questions were put forward, among them "Of What Use Is Chemistry As A Career?" which was answered with humorous comments. Other subjects of interest were touched upon, mostly in the field of Chemistry, among them the use of wood in the manufacture of synthetic products. Later a discussion of evolution, as regards Chemical structure, was brought up and several arguments on the subject were presented.

Sir Thomas More Discussed As Man Author And Martyr

Reverend P. Reid Addresses Literary Society on Noted Character

LED INSPIRED LIFE

"Was Nearest Thing to Saint Yet," Claims Speaker

"It is often said that no man has ever obtained perfection, but Sir Thomas More was an exception among men, he was a mighty man, a super man." These were the concluding words of the Reverend Martin P. Reid in an address on the life of Sir Thomas More to the St. James Literary Society last evening.

Born in London in 1478, Thomas More, the son of Sir John More a London judge, attended St. Anthony's free school until the age of twelve, when he was sent as a page to the house of Cardinal Morton, the Archbishop of Canterbury. In these surroundings, More saw and heard the leaders of thought of that age and was so greatly impressed that the Cardinal himself at one time said of him, "That lad will yet be heard from." Thomas was sent to Oxford after approximately six years with Cardinal Morton where he came in contact with Humanist Pioneers, More as a Man

In the words of the speaker, "Tennyson's lines, His strength is as the strength of ten because his heart is pure," apply to Sir Thomas More as they do to no other man. Erasmus himself referred to Sir Thomas as "a man with a heart whiter than any snow," when he was informed of More's death.

More, who was essentially a family man, built a house on the banks of the Thames surrounded by gardens filled with flowers and swarmed about by birds. Here, he was supremely happy living with his family, reading his books and visited by every great personage of Europe including Henry VIII and his friend Erasmus. He maintained discipline in his household by courtesy and benevolence, acting as a man rather than a master towards his servants.

Life of Patriarch

Living the life of a patriarch, he was the nearest thing to a Saint possible, maintaining a private chapel in his home in which he prayed every morning as well as on Sabbath and on holidays. He wrote some surprisingly devout things such as never had

Growth Of Europe Traced By Speaker

Dr. Whitelaw Stresses National Tendencies Before Historical Club

"Europe has become less cosmopolitan, its people are thinking more of their own little groups," stated Dr. Whitelaw, of the Department of History to the members of the History Club of Montreal at a lecture on Monday night.

"The culture and arts of the various countries have and are suffering from this spirit of nationalism," Dr. Whitelaw then explained the growth and development of Europe from the 13th century to the time prior to the Great War. During this time there was colonial rivalry among the different countries, and wars made rather by the different governments than by the people themselves.

Canada, with no boundary disputes and her only near neighbour a friendly one, Dr. Whitelaw concluded, had far to go before she could appreciate the troubles in European countries.

Community Growth Topic For Meeting

SPECIAL emphasis will be laid on the effects of community development at the next meeting of the Sociological Society, when Miss Eya Young of the Department of Sociology will present a paper on "Problems of Land Settlement." This meeting will be held on Friday at 8 P.M. in Strathcona Hall.

Professor Culliton of the Department of Economics and Professor Lattimer of the school of Agriculture at Macdonald College are also expected to speak. Col. Bovey too, is being asked to be present to add his point of view.

After the speakers have presented their views the meeting will be open for discussion, and then refreshments will be served. A special invitation is extended to members of the Labour Club and any others who may be interested.

Colonel Trihey To Address Newman Club Next Sunday

L. T. COLONEL H. J. TRIHEY, K.C., member of the Montreal Harbour Commission, will be the guest speaker at a regular meeting of the Newman Club to be held in Congress Hall on next Sunday morning, December 2nd. The meeting will be preceded by Low Mass in the Lady Chapel at 9:45 A.M. Col. Trihey will speak on a vital topic and will discuss some outstanding feature of the local port. In the early fall, the Newman Club Engineers were the guests of Col. Trihey on board the "Sir Hugh Allan" and gathered some valuable information on local port conditions.

At the meeting, Fred Carpenter, President, will announce the date of the next informal to be held in the large auditorium of Congress Hall. There will be no admission fee and a voluntary collection will be taken up at the close of the evening's entertainment. A committee will also be named to take charge of the annual function at the Father Dowd Memorial Home. It is a tradition with the Club to bring Christmas Cheer to the old folks at this institution and the date has been definitely set for Thursday evening, December 13th.

A tentative date of February 15th has been set for the Annual "At Home" at the Mount Royal Hotel. Frank Corrigan, chairman of the "At Home" has been very active and will name the members of his committee at Sunday's meeting. Rita McLaughlin has extended an invitation to all the lady members of the Club for a bridge to be given at her home — 629 Davaar Avenue, Outremont — on next Saturday afternoon, December 1st. Proceeds will be devoted to Christmas baskets for the poor. Lady members are asked to communicate with Miss Rita McLaughlin, At. 4640.

Old Madrid Subject Of Spanish Lecture

Professor Sugars Gives Illustrated Lecture to Club

DEALT WITH CUSTOMS

Alcala, Birthplace of Cervantes, Described as University Seat

Old Madrid formed the basis for an illustrated lecture by Professor Sugars, associate-secretary of the School of Commerce at McGill, which was delivered in Spanish to a meeting of the Spanish Club, held last night in the Union Grill Room. In describing the various important centres around Madrid, the speaker gave special emphasis to Alcala de Henares, which is famous not only for its many universities, but also because it is the birth place of the great Spanish poet, Cervantes, who has been termed the "Spanish Shakespeare."

As each slide was run upon the screen, Professor Sugars offered a commentary on Spanish history, customs and ceremonies, both ancient as well as modern. Speaking of the variable climate to which Madrid is susceptible, the lecturer declared it to be rather unhealthy, and as a consequence illness among the inhabitants is increased.

Birthplace Mentioned

In his discussion upon Alcala de Henares, the speaker added that besides its being the birthplace of Cervantes, the town was also once the seat of a famous university of the same name, during the sixteenth century, having an enrollment of 12,000 students. Being situated so close to Madrid, this small town has often been termed the Versailles of Madrid, for it is by way of being a summer resort of renown.

Professor Sugars also dealt with the many famous and celebrated buildings which abound in Madrid, noting especially the Escorial, built in the form of a gridiron, and which is the possessor of a large and magnificent library, also renowned as a haven for professors. The slides dealt to a great degree with the many statues in Old Madrid, several of which have been recently demolished in the revolution which also overthrew the monarchy.

Included in the number of slides, which were presented, were numerous ones portraying the market-places, bridges, squares and gates of the ancient city. There were in the lecture a few slides taken during the marriage procession of the late deposed Alfonso.

The customs and habits, which play a large part in the life of the city, and which are touched upon in the texts of the Spanish course at McGill, were also dealt with by Professor Sugars. The lecture, which was in Spanish, was well attended.

Labour Club Hears Interesting Speech By Mr. Michael Buhly

Dialectic Materialism Formed Basis of Marxian Doctrines

CLASS STRUGGLE SEEN

Exploitation Results From Difference Between Price and Cost

The economic doctrine of Karl Marx, as related to and proceeding from his philosophical and historical theories, was the subject of an address by Mr. Michael Buhly to the members of the McGill Labour Club in Strathcona Hall last evening. Marx, stated Mr. Buhly, rejected idealism in all its forms, accepting and broadening the dialectic materialism of Hegel, which admits not only the slow progress of evolution but also its essential revolutions and catastrophes.

The aim of Marx was not to explain but to change the world. In this direction he used materialism as a weapon, not of whim but of social necessity. As consciousness is explained by materialism as the outcome of existence, so is social consciousness explained as the outcome of social existence. Man's grapplings with nature determine his social relationships and hence his consciousness.

Historical Attitude Important

Marx's historical attitude is important as being the first to consider the progress of the masses. Since then all historians have made at least some effort to conform with this interpretation. Marx describes history as the direct outcome of class struggles, according to the speaker.

In the field of economics Marx traced the growth of the capitalist system from the old self-supporting communities which expanded and began to exchange commodities with one another, all commodities becoming mirrored in one durable and divisible commodity — money. Money becomes capital only when a surplus of it is gathered into the hands of the capitalist class. This surplus is not the result of circulation but of the exploiting of labour as a commodity by the capitalists. All hours put into production by labour above what labour takes from production represent a surplus for the capitalist.

Fascism Brutal Example

In giving advice to the worker, Marx cautioned that immediate needs should be used as stepping-stones and intervals of space as opportunity

League Circularizes All Campus Bodies

Organizations Asked to Co-operate With Anti-War Council

Circular letters have been sent out by the McGill "League against War and the Suppression of Civil Liberties" to all the major organizations on the Campus, inviting them to send two representatives each to an enlarged Council Meeting. This Council Meeting will take place on Thursday afternoon at 4:30 in Strathcona Hall.

Among the organizations that have been approached are the Students' Council, the Undergraduate Societies of the Faculties, the Fraternities and Sororities, and also the Societies on the Campus. Such groups as have not been approached are also invited to attend, so that the entire body of student opinion be represented.

At this meeting all matters relating to the League are expected to be thrashed out, and four groups will be formed. The first group will study the causes of war; the second will study civil liberties in Canada; the third will study college life in fascist countries like Italy and Germany. The fourth group, a research group, will devote itself to the formation of a unified opinion about the findings of the other three groups.

Preparations will also be completed for the next general meeting which will be featured by a symposium.

Scholarship Announced

It has been announced that an annual scholarship of $100 will be awarded to a student of the Royal Victoria College by the Local Council of Jewish Women of Montreal, beginning with the Session 1935-36. The choice will be made by the Scholarship Committee of the Alumnae Society in consultation with the Warden.

Joint Meeting

There will be a joint meeting of Delta Sigma society, the Music Club, and La Societe Francaise, on Thursday at 4 o'clock in the R.V.C. common room.

Student Council Nominees Offer Election Platforms

Daily Campaign Will Cover All Candidates — Each Man Asked Five Questions Concerning Policy If Elected — Law and Commerce Men Interviewed — Remainder to Follow in Subsequent Issues — Better Representative Student Government is Objective

IN an attempt to give newcomers to the University and others as well some method of judging between the candidates for representatives to the Students' Executive Council, the McGill Daily is asking each candidate to answer certain questions concerning the Council. As this post is one of the most important to which a student may be elected, the Daily believes that haphazard selection of representatives should be avoided.

Jewish Charities Drive On Campus Well Under Way

22% of Objective Reached by Second Day

WITH 22 per cent of the objective collected so far, the Jewish Charity Drive on the McGill campus is keeping pace with the general campaign in the city where $53,285 or one fifth of the objective has been reported to date. The Faculty of Arts leads all others with 39 per cent of its objective already reached, while Medicine comes second with $14.60.

Collectors Meeting

ALL collectors, (faculty chairmen, class chairmen and other collectors) for the Jewish Charity Drive are asked to attend a meeting in the Union Music Room at five o'clock today.

Collection in the various faculties with several exceptions has been satisfactory and the following totals have been reported:

Medicine—$14.60.
Dentistry—$2.10.
Arts—$32.
R.V.C.—$4.25.
Graduates School—$2.00.
Engineering—$5.00.

This gives a total of $61.95 for the entire college, with three faculties as yet unreported, these being Architecture, Commerce and Law. Collectors in these three sections are urged to report their progress as soon as possible and remedy this condition.

These totals compare favorably with those of last year at this same period, were it not that the total objective has been increased 10 per cent to $75.

The Jewish Federated Charities are the oldest in Montreal, being in existence for 17 years. They are financially responsible for several constituent agencies, notably the

Glee Club Presents First Concert Soon

It was announced that the first concert of the year will be given in the Dominion Douglas Church on December 16. The next rehearsal of the club is called for December 4th. Stevens Will Speak

"Sexuality in Fungi" Subject For Biological Meeting

"Sexuality in Fungi" will be the subject discussed by R. H. W. Stevens at the next meeting of the Biological Society, which will take place on Thursday, Dec. 4th, in Room 21 of the Biological Building.

It is the speaker's intention to consider this question from the standpoint of the part that sex plays in the various forms of fungus plants, and of its genealogical importance. He will also deal with the practical importance of the question in its relation to the wheat rust, and will trace the evolution of sex from its earliest stages.

Literary Society Meets

The meeting of the English Literary Society, which was previously postponed due to the illness of Professor A. S. Noad will be held on Friday, in Room 13 of the Arts Building. The subject of the address will be on Gertrude Bell, the well known authoress and traveller.

Historical Club To Convene Thursday

Pre-Revolutionary Writers Subject of Papers

"Voltaire, Rousseau, and the Encyclopedists" will form the subjects of two papers to be presented at the meeting of the R.V.C. Historical Club which will take place tomorrow evening, November 29th, at 8 o'clock at the Kappa Kappa Gamma apartment, 768 Sherbrooke Street West, apartment I. Mary Stewart and Gertrude Wasserman will present respectively an appreciative and a criticism of these writers.

Voltaire appealed to the intellect, Rousseau to the heart, but both had one similar characteristic; they were daring challengers to the social and political system of their time. Voltaire, with his cry, "Ecrasez l'Infame," was one of the most potent forces in arousing a bitter anti-church feeling in France. Rousseau, with his denunciation of the institutions of the time, was considered a dangerous undermining element for the despotism of the time.

Even now, the problems raised by the ideas advocated by these men have not yet been settled. In France there still are a militant clerical and anticlerical party. While the question raised by Rousseau, that the people were sovereign, is still a controversial one, as the present unsettled conditions in many of the states of Europe show. The questions and problems thus raised should be of interest particularly to students of history. All members are especially requested to be present, as well as any others who are interested.

Clarification

AT the top of every editorial column of the Daily, there appear the following words, "Opinions expressed below are those of the Managing Board of the McGill Daily and not the official opinions of the Students' Society." It is apparently not very clearly understood that the words, "Opinions expressed below are those of the Managing Board of the McGill Daily," do not necessarily mean the unanimous opinion of the Managing Board, but only of the majority of it. Any editorial therefore, expresses only the opinions of the majority.

To make this matter absolutely clear to all who read the columns of the Daily, we are changing the above quotation to read as follows, "Opinions expressed below are those of the majority of the Managing Board of the McGill Daily and not the official opinions of the Students' Society."

Platforms

IT used to be the plaint of the Daily that when campus positions were to be filled there was seldom a sufficient supply of candidates from which to choose; accordingly many an important post was occupied by men chosen mainly because there was no one to oppose them. For the coming elections for representatives to the Students' Society and the Scarlet Key, fully 87 have been nominated.

Under such circumstances the ordinary student voter is seldom in a position to gauge the relative merits of the various individuals soliciting his support. Too often his only guide is the list of offices already held by these candidates. There is no assurance that the candidate concerned is sufficiently familiar with the constitution and workings of the society in question.

Accordingly to allow the electorate to gain an idea of the views of those from amongst whom they will have to choose their officers for the next year, the Daily is publishing a series of platforms and expressions of opinion on student affairs by those whose names will appear on the ballot forms of December 5th.

At the same time it is hoped to stimulate interest in several of the problems that the Council and the students will have to confront during the coming year. "Do you feel you know enough about the function of the Students' Council to warrant your election to it? This, the first question proposed to candidates, has reference to the constitutional powers and functions of the Council, which controls practically all campus bodies.

"Do you believe that fraternities have a place on the McGill campus and, if so, should they be under the jurisdiction of the Students' Council?" No official expression of opinion on the part of the Daily is here being intimated, the question having been inserted largely because it is one that in other universities seems to be coming to the fore, and may prove of vital importance at McGill.

"What do you think of the Athletic Board?" is again not an implication of criticism but a question destined, it is hoped, to stimulate discussions of, and suggestions concerning, a very important element in the management of student affairs. "Is there too much emphasis being placed on intercollegiate competition?" needs no comment.

Finally, the alternative of an open meeting to the present form of closed gatherings is one on which every aspiring member of the Council should express his or her opinion in advance. Should there be any additional issues the Daily feels prepared to allow every candidate for a position on the Students' Council the opportunity of expressing their views, so that voters may know not only for whom but also for what they vote.

Correspondence

RECENTLY the Editor has received a large number of letters which should be of interest to the student body at large. Unfortunately the majority of these letters have been written in longhand, and as it is necessary to have them typewritten before they can be sent to print, it involves so much extra work, that the Editor is unable to rewrite them all. Consequently many letters have failed to appear for this reason. There are typewriters available at all times in the Daily Offices to those who wish to write letters to the Editor, and we would suggest that would-be correspondents use them.

PANEGYRICUS

By McParlfootin

What, No Holiday?

DULCE et Decorum, Pro Patria Mori, E Pluribus Unum, In Domino Confido, and Pro Bono Publico, and other such uneducated foreigners have been attempting of late, to destroy the calm serenity of an uneventful existence by clamoring for a holiday on Thursday. Why? Because that is the date set for the marriage of Prince George and Princess Marina. Every other institution of learning in the Empire—so the correspondents tell us—are getting a day off in honor of this event, so why not McGill?

And why not indeed? As a matter of fact, the paltry five months vacation that we get is scarcely sufficient. For two and a half months, between October 1st and the Christmas holidays there is no perceptible break in the overwhelming routine. Surely a two week holiday during the beginning of November would not be amiss. And if the authorities refuse us that little request, surely a day off in honor of a Great Event would be in order. But it's no use. The vitality of the average Canadian college student is being sapped. He is being sadly overworked. Fifty-four-forty or fight! A holiday by all means—any day!

Nominations

ONCE OR TWICE every year, the democratic principle asserts itself here to the extent that we sign nomination papers as a prelude to casting our Ballot. This time it's for the purpose of making annual selections for the Students' Key and the Scarlet Council. Although we aren't quite sure as to the way and wherefore of these august bodies, the fact that they stand for government of the student, by the student, for the student, is significant in itself. It is therefore a genuine source of delight to come across the following occasionally:

"We the undersigned hereby nominate I. M. A. Bigge-Shotte for . . . etc."—(sgd) Jones, Smith, Brown, Green, etc., etc."

"We the undersigned hereby nominate Zerubabel Jones for . . . etc."—(sgd) Bigge-Shotte, Smith, Brown, Green, etc., etc."

"We the undersigned hereby nominate Percival Twickenham Brown for . . . etc."—(sgd) Jones, Bigge-Shotte, Smith, Green, etc., etc."

"We the undersigned hereby nominate Ezekiel Joshua Smith for . . . etc."—(sgd) Jones, Bigge-Shotte, Green, Brown, etc., etc."

"We the undersigned, etc., etc. . . ."

This, as nothing else possibly can, shows the extent to which the Darwinian principle of mutual aid can be carried. Besides, everybody thus has a fighting chance. (N.B. The names mentioned above are absolutely fictitious, and in no way refer to any particular individual. And if you're NOT particular, there's nothing we can do about it.

Why Not Try It?

WE HAVE every regard for the above-mentioned democratic system. But that doesn't stop us from toying with intriguing ideas. How would a dictatorship fare in student government? Not the indirect and apparently non-existent type of dictatorship suggested by scare-mongers who torment us with the atrocities of interlocking directorates. Rather a real, honest-to-goodness, making-no-bones-about-it dictatorship. There you have something that is fraught with entertaining possibilities. And here's how.

Our potential Duce must first study the elementary principles of dictating. Hence he should make a careful study of woman's position in married life. He must practice opening his mouth at least two feet saying Aaaaah in a mellow baritone. For at least three years, he should spend at least six months of each year in prison for at least eighty-seven political offences. His college course during that time can be pursued via correspondence. His first step to fame and fortune would be gained by handing out free peanuts and selling tags at the Roddick Gates. He then works on the Daily to make underground contacts, and after some time spent in such ground-work he can organize his March-on-the-Union—while a Students' Society meeting is in progress. If he strikes while the iron is hot, i.e., when the minutes of the last meeting are being read, victory will be his. He will be wildly acclaimed by the six members present, the reigning prexy will embrace him, and with surprising alacrity will hand over the paraphernalia of office. And the S. S. will find itself in the hands of a dictator.

You Ain't Heard Nothin' Yet!

NATURALLY one of his first acts will be to outlaw the Players' Club, and order their Den of Iniquity swept absolutely clean. Then only will they be convinced that crime doesn't pay even if the women's place isn't in the home. He will order the female element of that banned organization to purchase new hats. He will then strike at the root of the debating evil by abolishing the Junior Debating League,—for no dictator can stand competition. He will execute that ubiquitous militarist Major Inaccuracy, and feed the student body "salubrious fodder" through the McGill Daily, which he will rename The Journal For The Dissemination Of Appropriate Intellectual Fodder For The Students And Professors Of The University Of McGill. This he will do, firmly believing that to be brief is a virtue. He will decree Clean Shirts for all, pursuing with his principles of uniformity. The Union will be purged of Women, and Men will not be permitted to enroll in the R.V.C. And for the sake of peace he will declare war on the League against War.

Possibly things will come to such a pretty pass that we'll have a couple of assassinations. Life will no longer be calm and uneventful. Finally democracy will again win out, and we'll have more nominations, more elections, more sleeve-pulling, more shoulder-tapping, and more tranquility. A pretty picture indeed. But it's so pleasant to have flights of imagination.

Love Thy Neighbour

A CERTAIN interlocking director (or so he would have himself believe) has lately been making a habit of informing all and sundry that our enemies, like Insull's creditors, are legion, and that we have been a virtual fugitive from chain gangs and things for weeks. This little bit of libel has been somewhat supplemented in a more or less direct fashion by some catalyst, analyst, or what-everitist. If this be true, it only goes to show that the human race is indeed a thankless genus. But what we do want to say is that all who consider themselves our enemies are requested to submit their photographs for approval. And may heaven save us from our friends.

Incidentally, we have learned from our usually reliable occult source, that the guy who wrote the blast against interlocking directorates is vice-president of the Political Economy Club, secretary of the Debating Union, a member of the Constitutional Committee of the Arts Undergraduate Society, honorary secretary of the P.T. associate editor of the Daily and president of another campus organization. Interlocking directorates forsooth! McPARLFOOTIN.

Broken Hearts

It would appear that there are certain students in the University that are seeing the column in a flippant light; although it was with no hint of humour that Broken Hearts was inaugurated, we feel it is our duty to answer in the same tone the letters we receive so here we are with light touches to relieve our "infinite sagacity."

Dear Miss Fixit:—

I am very much in love with a girl that constantly asks me to her home of an evening. Sometimes we play bridge, sometimes we talk to her parents and of late when her family have been out we have listened in silence to the radio. Need I go any farther and tell you that in several of these innings I have made (shall we say) third base, but then Voila! (she's French) her pet poodle has to be taken for a walk! This is disconcerting to say the least, what would you advise.

Yours in agitation.

STEPIN FETCHIT.

Stepin Fetchit, my son!

Transfer your affection to the dog!

Dear Miss Fixit:—

I am a student at McGill. I am graduating this spring. When I leave college I should like to marry a college girl. However I see none on the campus that would do. You see, Miss Fixit, the girl I marry must be a "good, wholesome woman," she must not smoke, drink or swear and she must like her home better than movies and dancing; she must not be flippant or flirtatious. Where may I find her?

OSCAR.

Dear Oscar:—

You amuse me. So you see no girls on the campus that would do? I'm going to quote a little poem that will either lead you to find what you want or else shake you out of your coma.

"The girl I like keeps saying 'NO'
She would rather sit and sew
Than go gaily stepping out
And decorum's tenets flout!
She will neither smoke nor drink
And expects no jewels or mink.
Exercising self control
Is her everlasting goal.
I could cherish such a miss:
Live with her in righteous bliss.
When I find her, chiming will ring—
I WILL WED THE UGLY THING!
You figure it out, Oscar.

FANNY FIXIT.

Dear Fanny:—

I have gone with a girl for two years and have always been very fond of her. Last year her uncle died and left her a million dollars. Since that time she has become very popular and is being asked out continually. Naturally I feel I have prior rights. What should I do?

(Signed) PENNILESS.

Dear Penniless:—

As in any other gold rush—stake your claim! P.S. I would rather you addressed me as Miss Fixit until we have corresponded a little longer.

Dear Miss Fixit:—

I have heard a great deal about your distinguished career as a healer of wounded hearts. I am confident therefore that you can help me in my heart's desire.

I am madly in love. The young man who is the object of my affection has an established reputation as a lover. His vows of love are almost professional in tone—like bits snatched from a movie. Words of love alone cannot be trusted. What is a reliable symptom of true love? To what extent can one rely upon the caress as a token of love; and does one type of kiss have more significance than another? Help me, my dear Miss Fixit, and deserve the heart-felt thanks of the loverlorn.

WORRIED WINNIE.

My Dear Winnie:—

Yours is a general problem. I shall answer your questions as you asked them. (1) What is a reliable symptom of true love? Ans. A smoothly shaven chin on all occasions. (2) To what extent can one rely upon the caress as a token of love? Ans. Why rely on it? Enjoy yourself. (3) And does one type of kiss have more significance than another? Ans. YES MAM!!!

Dear Miss Fixit:—

There is a certain medical student up here from the States that I am very much in love with and I might add that he is in love with me. However I could never contemplate marrying anyone that was not a Canadian and my family will not hear of my marrying an American. On the other hand, the family of this boy are as much averse to his marrying a Canadian as mine are to my marrying anyone from another country and the boy himself will not consider it. So there we are very much in love and what can we do about it?

HIGH TARIFF.

Dear High Tariff:—

With all that opposition I think that you would be quicker working for a union between the States and Canada.

FANNY FIXIT.

P.S. So many letters were received that it was impossible to answer them this time. I will reply to them next time.

FROBISHER'S FROLICS

Dear Ma:—

As I wrote you in my last letter, I had a very enjoyable few days in New York, and I am sorry that I was unable to recount to you my experiences there in their entirety. Feeling that you would naturally be intensely interested in all that your son does, I have decided to devote this letter to a further exposition to my activities in the great metropolis.

You will recall that I told you of my going to the Horse Show in my last letter. Well, after the Show, Roberta suggested that we go tea-dancing, but I felt rather exhausted from my strenuous day, and declined—offering, however, to take her to dinner at any establishment she might care to name. To this she acquiesced, and arranged to meet me in my suite at seven o'clock.

To my great relief, the ordeal of waiting was soon over, and we emerged from the hotel in full evening clothes. Roberta procured a taxi, and directed him to a place known as the "Greasy Spoon" on Twelfth street, assuring me the while that the food at this establishment was superb beyond belief. Upon our arrival there, the head-waiter greeted us most cordially, and said to Roberta, "Another one, darling?" To this remark Roberta said, "Yes—shut up." I thought this interchange of language most amusing, and truly indicative of Roberta's well-developed sense of humor—which, I am sure, was instrumental in procuring us a very fine table for two, far removed from the rest of the establishment's patrons.

Roberta advised me to allow her to do the ordering of our meal, and I must say that her fore sight in this direction resulted in a most excellent repast: bean soup, wienerswists and beans, bean salad, and bean pudding. You will recall that I strongly stigmatized the fraternity of Eta Beta Pi for serving me a similar meal of beans, but I am beginning to feel that, perhaps my aversion to beans was unfounded—or at that the fraternity's were not well-cooked. At any rate, I enjoyed the meal immensely, and found Roberta a most charming dinner-companion—although she did seem to have some difficulty in arranging her limbs comfortably under the table. So much so, in fact, that I had another table placed beside our own, to the end that her comfort might be greater, and that my own knees might not interfere too much with her freedom of movement. At the conclusion of our meal, the head waiter bowed us out of the restaurant with the remark to Roberta, "Good hunting, infant!" To this Roberta replied, "Rome wasn't built in a day—or made, either." The ensuing laughter on the part of all concerned made our exit a most pleasant one.

Roberta suggested, as we were driven uptown in another taxi, that we go dancing at some night-club—adding, however, that we should have to "kill some time" before carrying out that part of her program. To this I assented, and asked what she thought would be a good "time-killer." She cogitated a moment or two, and then suggested a ride about the park in a hansom cab. I, however, felt that a little cultural uplift would not be amiss, and suggested that we go to a cinema to see "Girl of the Limberlost."

I enjoyed the picture immensely—it concerned itself with the trials and tribulations of a pure, sweet young girl, untouched by the withering hand of passion, and innocent as the drifted snow. Roberta, however, said that such sweetness and light—her very words, Ma—was not for her, and so we left before the picture was over—much to my regret.

I hailed another taxi, and Roberta directed its driver to the Hollywood Club—a place which she assured me "would snap me out of whatever inhibitions I had." The interior of this establishment was brilliantly—even garishly-lighted, and it was crowded beyond all belief. The head-waiter greeted Roberta with, "Back at the old stamping ground, eh?" to which Roberta replied, "Yeah—shut up." I, of course, was much amused by her pseudo-sophistication, but said nothing. We were given a very nice table quite close to the dance floor, and Roberta ordered for both of us.

As the food arrived, I was startled to see a group of young ladies emerge upon the dance floor—apparently fleeing from some great catastrophe, for they had literally nothing on. I at once rose from my chair, and pressed my coat upon the nearest of the unfortunate damsels, but was met with a most rude rebuff couched in these terms, "Don't be a sap all your life, little one!"

It was then that I received my greatest shock: the young ladies, instead of retiring in modest confusion, actually performed a dance of a most lascivious nature there on the floor, with all the establishment's patrons looking on! I felt ashamed of my country, and resolved to give to such proceedings no part of my approval. I changed seats with Roberta, and sat with my back to this orgy of lustful gyrations.

It was with a feeling rather of sorrow than anger that I noticed Roberta's reaction to this immoral spectacle. She actually seemed to be enjoying it!

Feeling that she was no fit companion for one to whom all the world looks up as the saviour of culture in this country, I forthwith took her home, went back to my hotel, packed, and caught the next train to Montreal. I cannot but think that Aunt Sophie must be in some way morally affected by the evils of this great city, and I am glad that I did not go to see her, for I am sure that she would have exhibited a picture of sin-loving vice that would go ill with one of my training and upbringing. All love to you and Pa from your loving son,

FERDINAND WILBERFORCE FROBISHER

Theatre Review

Princess Theatre

GEORGE ARLISS' performance in The Last Gentleman, now showing at the Princess Theatre has been such an attraction to the movie-going public of Montreal that the management of the theatre has decided to hold the picture over during the present week.

The story of The Last Gentleman is not a new one, but it is given new significance by the acting of Arliss. An old gentleman with a very brief period of life remaining is blessed with a large fortune and a great number of heirs. The distribution of this wealth is the theme of the story. The ultimate decision of Arliss in making his will brings about a climax that is surprisingly superb.

Arliss is masterful in his new role, and brings another polished display of acting to the screen. The supporting cast which includes Edna May Oliver, Janey Beecher, Ralph Morgan and Charlotte Henry is admirable and the work of Miss Henry is especially commendable.

The added attraction, Blind Date has also been held over with The Last Gentleman. This is a romantic episode of a blind date and its eventual happy outcome. The presence of Neil Hamilton and Ann Sothern help to make Blind Date a pleasing performance.

Senior Puck Squad Faces Tough Grind In Coming Contests

Heavy Inter-College Schedule In Addition to Group Tills

INACTIVE TONIGHT

Two games with Varsity, and exhibition games with Yale, Harvard and Queen's, in addition to the regular Senior Group schedule, will supply Coach Bell's Red Raiders with plenty to think about for the next two months. The Redmen have a night off, this evening, as far as Senior Group activity is concerned, but they swing into action next week against Don Peniston's powerful Royals.

Queen's was declared eligible to enter the Senior Intercollegiate league by the C.I.A.U. over the week-end, and the final decision with the Kingstonians is expected some time in the near future. However, in any event, McGill is prepared to meet the Tricolor in an exhibition tilt here in the Forum. Western is definitely not entering the projected intercollegiate loop.

Dates Of Games

The home and home series with Varsity has been scheduled for February 2 in Toronto, and February 15th here. The Yale Bulldogs cross the border for their crack at the Redmen on December 14, while Harvard puts on its appearance at the Forum the following week, in the 21st. During the Christmas holidays, the McGill sextet will journey down to the Madison Square Garden to cross sticks with an unnamed opponent—probably Princeton and Dartmouth, on January 5. The meet Harvard in a return match in Boston on the 9th, and Yale, in New Haven, on the 7th.

For Sports Columnists Only

By Nitooferapom

THIS column is designed especially for all aspiring and perishing Sports Scribes, who realize, and quite rightly so, that every writer of any significance in sports should have an independent tribunal from which he may voice his views, opinions and other such startling evidence of intellectual activity. Besides this important phase, a Sports Column is always an excellent way to fill space. This latter, however, is a moot question.

NATURALLY our first consideration will be the technique of columniating. What are the whys and wherefores, the ifs, whens, buts and aces? The primary consideration is the choice of a name, something like Splices of Spurts, Livewires from the Deadline, Honi Soli Qui Mai Y Pense; or anything really striking.

OUR columnist must be a prophet—and like all prophets unappreciated in his own land. His predictions must be at least 99 per cent wrong, and in any case should differ from those of his contemporaries. When an all-Canadian football team is picked, he must certainly have a totally different version of his own.

SUCH a scribe must perform well in statistics. At the drop of a hat he should be able to inform all and sundry, with weighty authority, what the diet of the Oshkosh University's mascot consists of, why a pig-skill should not be handled with kid gloves, and who's to blame for the international situation.

NOR can he consider himself worthy of his metier if he doesn't campaign for that long-awaited gym and swimming pool, to say nothing of a decently supervised bridge and ping-pong league.

ALTHOUGH sufficiently insulting to attract attention, he must at all times be courteous and considerate, especially to opposing referees, who still believe that honesty is the best policy, and anyhow, why not let the home team win.

HE must never miss a chance of commenting on any athletic event with that tour de force, and air of je ne sais quois, plus intelligibly bad grammar, so essential to Sports Corresponding.

IF he follows the above directions meticulously, and doesn't say nasty things about debutantes or professional amateurism, he may reach the apex (or nadir) of his career by sportswriting a column on some big city paper with his picture (maybe) on the caption. The picture end of it is optional.

MCGILL BOXERS WIN AND LOSE IN LAST NIGHT'S PROV. BOUTS

McGill boxers broke even in last night's Provincial Junior Boxing Championships, when Wisdom of McGill won a decisive decision from Di Lally of the St. Albans Club in the 147 pound class, while Ryan, of Richelieu, shaded Corbett in a very closely fought bout in the 160 pound class.

In the first bout, Wisdom took the first two rounds by a wide margin, making a brilliant boxing display. The Ryan-Corbett set-to was really a toss-up, with the judges finally awarding the decision to the former. Last night's bouts leave Wisdom still in the running for the Provincial crown in the 147 pound class.

The Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir—

I should like a few words with "One Who Actually Saw The Game" between Ottawa and McGill last Saturday in Ottawa. I heartily agree with his statement that "sportsmanship is essential to any game and should be shown both by the spectator and the player" and then I am led to believe that the smoky atmosphere must have affected both his eyes and ears. The Ottawa crowd, the Ottawa team and the "Ottawa" referees (wherever they hale from) put on a display that was anything but sportsmanlike, while McGill did nothing to spoil their fine reputation. Many of the more impartial spectators commented on the fine spirit displayed by the whole McGill team and particularly by the captain who was taken for an entirely undeserved ride by the Senators and the referees.

I have always been a keen supporter of Ottawa and its teams but after this exhibition on Saturday I prefer to be known as a McGill student than as an "Ottawan."

Ed. Note: Thanks pal. At least somebody appreciates me.

From a common "pleader of the laws" More eventually rose to the Chancellorship of Lancaster and then to the Lord Chancellorship of England. His success as Chancellor may easily be seen by the words of the French Ambassador at the time of his death. "The Chancellor has resigned seeing that he would have to go against his conscience. Everyone is concerned because there never was a better man in office."

He died the death of a martyr to the Catholic Church for which he was recorded as the "Blessed Thomas More." He was missed by all even the King, for he was "the first and greatest and most lovable of all Englishmen, a tantalizing hint of what all Englishmen might have been."

pressed somewhat similar opinions. His reply to the first question was: "The mere fact that one has consented to run for the Students' Council should warrant his knowledge of the workings of the Council." He refused to answer the next two questions, but believed that there is not too much intercollegiate competition in athletics. Finally, he said, "My opinion tends toward favouring meetings held before the student body, but in view of the good work of the recent council, I would hesitate to advocate any immediate change."

Commerce Candidates Differ
In Commerce, views were somewhat different. John Kennedy, John Lewis, and J. D. McMoran all answered the first question in the affirmative, but disagreed on the second. Although all three believed that fraternities are useful inasmuch as they enable out of town students to become acquainted, Kennedy and McMoran thought that these organisations should run themselves, as they have been doing all along, while Lewis preferred them to be under Students' Council jurisdiction.

Again all three agree about the next questions. According to them, the Athletic Board is functioning as it should, and intercollegiate competition is not overestimated at McGill. Finally, they agree that the present system of executive meetings is best. McMoran because he thinks that otherwise the Council could not get through the same amount of work, Lewis and Kennedy because they believe that the Council is representative of the student body and thus should be able to carry out their duties without having to refer to the students each time.

In answer to a question Mr. Buhy called Fascism one of the most brutal examples of capitalist dictatorships and that of a capitalism in its last agonies.

Fur Coat Stolen

A fur coat was stolen from the Ladies' Room of Strathcona Hall Wednesday night at the meeting of the Philosophical Society. The person who took it out must have been very conspicuous and it is possible that some student saw it. If any woman student was in the Ladies' Room and noticed whether or not it was there at some particular time, it is important to know this too. Please communicate any information immediately to Sylvia Cardon, CR. 9542. The coat is size 14, silver muskrat, dark muskrat scarf collar, buttoning on each shoulder, dark muskrat cuffs, and full sleeves.

dity for the School of Commerce.
Thanking those who so kindly signed my nomination,
Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT MACDUFF.

Editor of the McGill Daily.
Dear Sir,—

I do not intend to pose as an apologist of the "modern crime" as one of your editorial board of Sunday night last, so characterized debate parties, on a large scale.—But I do take exception to his article as a whole.

Doubtless, the money expended on such debates could be put to much better use in many other channels, such as relieving the suffering which now prevails on such a large scale in Montreal. But your article entirely overlooked another aspect of the whole affair. It seems to me, and I am positive I am correct in this contention, that the parents of these debutantes are at least doing something to start the wheels of industry turning. Rather than have their funds lie sterile in a bank—like the great proportion of our wealthy people—they are investing them in the more useful channel, consumption. For that reason alone they are deserving of some credit.

But I will admit that these affairs are to a great extent discredited. On the continent where they originated there was every reason for their existence. It was only natural that girls, having spent the greater part of their schooling in convents or other places of seclusion, should desire some means of making outside acquaintances. Debutante affairs served their purpose admirably. But in Montreal these functions take on an entirely different aspect. They are merely an enlarged party at which precisely the same people with whom the debutante is already acquainted, assemble once again.

Thanking you in anticipation of any space you may give this correspondence,
Yours truly,
GRAD.

Editor McGill Daily,
Dear Sir,—

Since 1928, editors of the McGill Daily have sat back in their armchairs and philosophically moaned about students to the superior powers.

They absolutely forgot the thousands of men who gave their lives for their country and now they are unconcerned about the forthcoming royal nuptials.

On looking at my handbook, I find that they have further manifested their indifference by allowing a holiday on February 13th, and one on March 6th. Both of these are Ash Wednesdays.

"Quicquid id est, timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. I am,

We hereby nominate CAMPBELL McARTHUR, OF 2ND YEAR MEDICINE for SCARLET KEY, GROUP "B":—G. V. Mitchell, Paul P. Osmun, Fraser N. Gurd, Ole Jensen, John E. Gillick, John Teahan, Francis S. Erickson, Horace Kessler, S. A. Flynn, T. J. Hughes, E. E. Kemble.
